Eddystone Lighthouse. This famous lighthouse stands on a reef of rock out at sea, about 14 miles from Plymouth. The first lighthouse erected here was swept away in a storm with its builder, Winstanley (in 1700); then followed one which stood for 50 years, and was burned in 1755; and next came Smeaton's Tower, which was superseded after nearly 120 years by the present lighthouse in 1882, which stands 130 feet above high-water mark.
